What We Are Learning

Read Aloud : Alexander, Who Used to Be Rich Last Sunday by Judith Viorst

Comprehension: I can identify the lesson/moral of the story.

Grammar: I can identify pronouns.

Phonics: I can spell words with r-controlled vowels.

Writing: I can write a recipe for our "Cooking in the Classroom" blog.

Math: I can add and subtract 3-digit numbers., including regrouping ones, tens, and hundreds.

Social Sciences: I can learn about changes. I will conduct an investigation to describe and classify various substances according to physical properties (e.g., milk being a liquid, not clear in color, assuming shape of its container, mixing with water; mineral oil being a liquid, clear in color, taking shape of its container, floating in water; a brick being a solid, not clear in color, rough in texture, not taking the shape of its container, sinking in
